

Chemicals used for treatment of water intended for human consumption — Sodium silicate

The European Standard EN 1209:2003 has the status of a
British Standard

ICS 71.100.80

National foreword

This British Standard is the official English language version of EN 1209:2003. It supersedes BS EN 1209:1998 which is withdrawn.

The UK participation in its preparation was entrusted to Technical Committee CII/59, Chemicals for drinking water treatment, which has the responsibility to:

- aid enquirers to understand the text;
- present to the responsible international/European committee any enquiries on the interpretation, or proposals for change, and keep the UK interests informed;
- monitor related international and European developments and promulgate them in the UK.

A list of organizations represented on this committee can be obtained on request to its secretary.

Additional information

Article 10 of the Council of the European Community Directive 98/83/EC on the quality of water intended for human consumption requires Member States to ensure that substances and materials (including associated impurities) used in the preparation of drinking water do not remain in treated water at concentrations that are higher than necessary or that would reduce the protection of public health provided for in the Directive.

This requirement is given effect in England and Wales by regulation 25 of the Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989 (similar provisions apply in Scotland and Northern Ireland). Regulation 25 makes provision for attaching conditions of use to chemicals and filter media that are authorized for use in public water supplies.

Details of conditions of use are contained in the List of Products and Processes Approved Under Regulations 25 and 26 For Use In Connection With The Supply of Water For Drinking, Washing, Cooking and Food Production Purposes published by the Drinking Water Inspectorate, Floor 2/A1, Ashdown House, 123 Victoria Street, London SW1 6DE (www.dwi.gov.uk).
